Featured Saint of the Week

St. Paul Miki and Companions (1562-1597)

Feast: February 6

St. Paul Miki was a Japanese Catholic evangelist and Jesuit priest known for his martyrdom during a 16th century anti-Catholic uprising.

He was born into a wealthy Japanese family who provided him a good academic education courtesy of his Jesuit schooling. Paul decided to join the Jesuit Order and became a well-known and successful preacher, gaining numerous converts to Catholicism.

It was late in the 16th century, that the ruler of Japan started ordering Catholic persecutions, endangering all Catholics. The emperor was afraid of the Jesuits' influence and intentions, believing that their influence might also extend to the European visitors.

Fr. Miki was arrested and jailed along with fellow Catholics in Kyoto. They were forced to march 600 miles to Nagasaki. During their march, they chanted the Te Deum. Alongside Fr. Miki, were 25 other prisoners: two more Jesuit priests, six Franciscan missionaries, and 17 members of the Third Order of St. Francis, which included three altar boys.

Before being hung on a cross and martyred, they were each tortured and paraded through several villages. Fr. Miki preached his final sermon from the cross, and in it he forgave the executioners.

In 1622, after an additional 125 Catholics were martyred, Catholicism was officially outlawed in Japan. The Church remained without clergy; theological teachings faded. It wasn't until 250 years later in the 19th century, with the arrival of Western missionaries, that a community of "hidden Catholics" was found. They had been practicing their faith underground for years and could now finally begin practicing it in public. Today, Nagasaki has the largest Catholic population in Japan.

These first martyrs of Japan came to be especially revered. St. Paul Miki, along with his companions, was canonized by Pope Pius IX in 1862.
